On the margins of the event Rosoboronexport's Director General A. Mikheev met foreign partners at numerous meetings presided by Secretary N. Patrushev of the Russian Security Counsel and his deputies, as well as bilateral conferences.

As of today, we cooperate on this project with the law enforcers in more than 20 states. The negotiations that we held at the forum will result in more countries joining the list,” Alexander Mikheev expects.

The project encompasses integrated solutions to issues like cyber security, law enforcement, aerial and off-shore control, protection of state borders, large municipalities and administrative entities, as well as key facilities.

Rosoboronexport also set up an image-building display on the sidelines of the event. For the participants, the company made presentations on security assets manufactured in Russia and ran its demonstration movies, namely Russian Comprehensive Security Assets, Russian Counterterrorist Equipment, and Russian Weapons Fighting Terrorists in Syria.
